A railroad line is now being surveyed eastward from Robbins station on the Cincinnati Southern, under the direction of Mr. Vankenvan, C.E., of New York. There is a desire it will run westward from Sedgemoor, by the projected Rugby and Fentress County line ultimately connecting Knoxville with Nashville.

An inventive Tennessean named Starr,—by no means an inappropriate cognomen—is in New York with the model of an aerial ship, which is attracting much attention. He has exhibited it to some scientific men at Cooper Institute. Mr. Starr claims to have made many improvements in navigating between heaven and earth.

The State prosecution of the two Mabrys, for the murder of the two Luslys, commenced in the Criminal Court at Knoxville, Tuesday. Most of the day was taken up in forming a jury. There are two cases against each defendant, but all will be taken collectively and be tried at one hearing. There are many witnesses on either side. The trial is attracting much attention.

A VISIT TO RUGBY.

In the London Daily News of September 12th was a letter from the Rev. J. M. Wilson, Head Master of Clifton College, Bristol, descriptive of his recent visit to Rugby, which, with the exception of one or two particulars, is very correct. The reverend gentleman writes:

"Rugby reminded me more of Bournemouth than any other place: a sandy, wide road, trees standing promiscuously about, and frame houses, with neat gardens inclosed with palisades, dotted here and there among the trees. We pass the Hughes Public Library, a building erected by well-wishers to Mr. Hughes in Boston, Cincinnati, New York, and elsewhere, and to which American publishers have sent about 5,000 volumes, and which Chicago offers to make 'symmetrical' by supplying some thousands more. Rugby is fortunate in having the services of an excellent librarian, Dr. Bertz, of Tübingen. The next building that catches the eye is the church. It is a two-storied building; the lower story is a school, of course free, now inspected and partly supported by the State, under the charge of Miss Brown, a highly-accomplished New England teacher, whose father is one of the early settlers. The upper story is used for religious services—in the morning for the Anglo-American Episcopal Church, in the evening for a Congregational service. Both services are usually conducted by Mr. Blacklock, a layman, formerly an English schoolmaster, who has established himself at Rugby with his seven sons in a large and successful farm, and undertakes this Church work as a labor of love with characteristic energy. When I mention that in the school the average attendance is fifty, and that the attendance at church on Sunday morning was between fifty and sixty, and that about twenty or twenty-five remained to the Holy Communion, it will be evident enough that the settlement is not non-existent..... About 2,000 acres have been sold as farm land to various colonists, chiefly from England and the Northern States, and a considerable number of town lots. On some of the town lots are exquisite little cottages. One belonging to Mrs. Hughes, Mr. Hughes's mother, a vigorous lady of 86, is a perfect gem, though I think others quite equal to it. Flowers and vegetables and fruit trees grow here excellently, and I shall never forget the evenings spent under her hospitable verandah, watching the humming-birds flit among the flowers, till the sun set, and the katy-dids began their chorus, and the fireflies began to dart about, and the stars shone out with a brilliancy that I have never seen equalled in England. The farms here are clearings from the primeval forest. Here are growing corn, millet, potatoes, tomatoes, cabbages, onions, tobacco, apples, peaches, and all sorts of melons. For all these, except the first, the soil is very well suited. It will never compete with the rich low lands in corn. The farmhouses are log houses, built of course by the settlers themselves and are not bad quarters. The creeks or rivers run in narrow valleys, almost of the nature of canons, about 300 feet below the plateau. There are extraordinarily picturesque. About a mile from the town is the junction of 'White Oak' and 'Clear Fork,' and no river scenery that I know surpasses it. Strata richer than the top sandstones crop out on the slopes of these canons, and then, when no fires have spread downwards to damage the trees, and with richer soil, other species of trees mix with those of the plateau and attain extraordinary size and beauty. The hemlock, spruce, white pine, yellow pine, and Spanish chestnut are magnificent, and among their stems are magnolias, kalmias, dogwood, sassafras, and rhododendrons of great size."

THE TABLE LANDS OF THE CUMBERLAND MOUNTAINS.

Cheap Lands, Magnificent Climate,
Good Soil, Good Water,
Good Markets.

We are now sub-dividing 40,000 acres, in Fentress County, into 100-acre lots. This land is situated on either side of the road leading from Sedgemoor station (on the Cincinnati Southern R.R.) to Jamestown, and commences about 4 miles west of Rugby. It is beautifully located, and its capabilities for farming purposes, stock raising, and fruit and vegetable raising, are undoubted. In order to give the first settlers a fair chance, we offer these lands, for the present, at the extremely low price of $3 per acre; quarter down, and the balance on time, with 6 per cent. annual interest. We also give to parties purchasing the option for two years for as much land as they may purchase, at the same price, by paying taxes and interest. As the value of land increases with settlement, it is safe to say that at the end of the two years the reserved land, if sold by the purchaser, will net enough profit to pay for the original purchase.

Mr. WILLIAM ROBINSON, whose hack makes connection with the 5.45 p.m. train from Cincinnati at Sedgemoor station, will take parties to the land at reasonable rates, and who will also be able to give all information regarding the same. Mr. J. N. CLARKE, of Rugby, and Mr. CYRUS CLARKE, of Jamestown, will be pleased to give all information regarding larger tracts for lumbering, mining, or for obtaining bark.

A circular descriptive of the above lands, containing a map of the United States, a map of Tennessee, and a plot of the land can be had on application to
